

Expanding Horizons: The Importance of International Experience in Today's World

Wednesday, May 8, 2024 at 8:00 PM

Guest speakers:

Dr. Sorin Nastasia, Associate Professor, Director of the International Studies degree program within the College of Arts and Sciences, Southern Illinois University Edwardsville

Ryan Donald, Study Abroad Specialist, Southern Illinois University, Edwardsville

Featuring international guests, students, and faculty engaged in exchange programs, the event will highlight the significant advantages of international experience in today's social, cultural, and economic landscape. Speakers will emphasize how international experience enhances academic performance and professional development, fosters critical thinking, understanding of global issues, and boosts creativity by exposing individuals to diverse cultures and work environments. Moreover, it encourages responsibility and contribution to global issues, builds a global network, improves cultural competence, and offers different perspectives. By spotlighting these advantages, the primary goal of this event is to promote international mobility among students and faculty in the Faculty of Theoretical and Applied Economics.
